

Unplanned Pregnancy Counselling Training

Presented by SHQ (Sexual Health Quarters)

Aimed at counsellors, psychologists, doctors, nurses, chaplains, social workers and others with qualifications and/or experience in counselling, this two-day course will provide participants with the fundamental knowledge, skills and attitudes required to provide effective and sensitive unplanned pregnancy counselling. Participants will gain essential knowledge, skills and understanding around areas such as:

- Issues relating to unplanned pregnancy
- Assisting the person in pregnancy decision-making
- The process and implications of all unplanned pregnancy options using current evidence-based data
- The unique and specialised components of unplanned pregnancy counselling, such as a person's age, life-stage, religious and/or cultural contexts
- Identification of the crisis nature of unplanned pregnancy counselling
- Appropriate psychosocial assessment
- Identification of the partner's involvement, family, social and support systems
- Assistance in the reduction of unresolved and/or abnormal grief reactions
- Support and clarification of a person's individual choice
- Referral to an appropriate range of service providers and agencies

The course combines face-to-face trainer-led theory sessions with practical learning activities and is based on experiential, group-based, co-operative learning and adult learning principles. Participants will be able to add to their own level of expertise, with the topics, issues and material used designed to be applicable to what they may find perplexing, challenging or difficult in their work at present.
